

Acknowledgments

I am greatly indebted to the many managers and on-the-spot staff members who gave me their precious time for repeated interviews, and to my research partners who supported me in carrying out the surveys. I must express particular gratitude to Dr Tian Fenglun, Professor Lin Hong, Mr. Peng Mingzhong, and Professor Shan Dong, without whose support and friendship this study could never have been completed. I would also like to express my gratitude to the top managers of companies who offered some of their precious time to me for the discussions. In particular, I must mention Presidents (at the time) He Shibin (China Jialing Industrial Co., Ltd.), Zuo Zongshen (Chongqing Zongshen Motorcycle Group), Yin Mingshan (Chongqing Lifan Industry Co., Ltd.), and Wang Dawei (Grand River Group).

I am also greatly indebted to many former and present staff members of Honda Motor Co., Ltd. and Yamaha Motor Co., Ltd. In particular, Mr. Yasuhiko Yamaguchi, Mr. Kenji Nakamura, Mr. Kōji Miyake, Mr. Shinji Tanaka, and the late Mr. Kanae Matsuura (Honda); and Mr. Ken'ichi Matsumura, Mr. Eiji Kishimoto, Mr. Hideaki Awano, Mr. Kazuyuki Yamashita, and Mr. Shōichirō Ikebe (Yamaha) gave me indispensable instructions and valuable chances to study the technology and business of motorcycles. Particularly, this study owes much to the late Mr. Matsuura who taught me about the strength of Japanese dominant firms, which are capable of creating and integrating a wide range of knowledge.

I was fortunate to be able to receive primary ideas on technologies from first-rate specialists, including Dr. Yoshimi Itō and Dr. Etsujiro Yokota, in the area of manufacturing technologies in the machinery industry, and Ms. Ruri Noguchi and Mr. Atsushi Ishiyama, in industrial design. Dr. Itō kindly gave me precious comments on a part of this study.

For academics, I must express my gratitude to my respected teachers from my university days, Professors (then) Masaru Koshimizu, Mineo Nakajima, Peter B.

Oblas, and Lin Xiaorong at Tokyo University of Foreign Studies, and Professors Christopher Howe and Robert Ash at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London.

After entering the Institute of Developing Economies (IDE), I was given instruction by Professors Kazumi Yamamoto and the late Shōji Itō on Asian economic development. Professors Hiromi Yamamoto, Mitsuyuki Kagami, and Kyōichi Ishihara had the greatest influence on my learning in China studies. In particular, Professor Ishihara taught me about the multilayer structure of the Chinese economy. From Professor Katsuji Nakagane, I obtained ideas on the immaturity of China's market institutions. With regard to Chinese industry, I am most highly indebted to Professor Tomoo Marukawa, who also gave me significant comments for the draft of this study. I was also given precious encouragement from Professors Reetsu Kojima and Akira Suehiro, both former IDE researchers. Additionally, I must also thank my current IDE colleagues, particularly Ms. Taeko Hoshino, Dr. Junko Mizuno, Mr. Yasuo Ōnishi, Dr. Yuri Sato, Mr. Yukihito Sato, Dr. Takeshi Kawanaka, Mr. Minoru Teramoto, Mr. Ken Imai, Ms. Yoshie Shimane, Ms. Mai Fujita, Ms. Momoko Kawakami, and Ms. Mariko Watanabe.

While I was affiliated, as a visiting scholar, to the Institute of Industrial Economics, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, and the Institute of Economics, Sichuan Academy of Social Sciences, I received precious support particularly from Dr. Wu Jiajun, Dr. Jin Bei, Ms. Ding Yi, Dr. Yuan Gangming, Mr. Song Zhenhua, Dr. Zhang Zerong, Ms. Tong Lan, Ms. Zhai Naying, Ms. Kong Weijuan, and Mr. Agudamu.

In developing this study, I was greatly influenced by Professor Takahiro Fujimoto. The idea used in this study of examining an industry from the viewpoint of a strategic integration of “whole” and “parts” derives from his architecture-based view. As a member of a research project he headed at the University of Tokyo, I learned a great deal from him and other members, particularly Professors Yasuo Sugiyama and Jun Ōtahara. I was also given the opportunity to conduct field surveys under a research project of Kobe Gakuin University, and learned from the other members of that project, particularly Professors Megumi Nakamura and Kai Kajitani.

In preparing this book for publication, I am indebted to the editor, Mr. Yukio Saitō, without whose patience and warm encouragement it would never have reached final publication. I would also like to express my appreciation to Ms. Fumi Yamashita and Mr. Jens Wilkinson for their efforts in translating the work.

Again, I express my sincerest thanks to all the persons mentioned above.

Finally, I would like to express my deepest gratitude to my wife, Yang Pi-ching, who always supported and encouraged me with great patience. We are very happy to celebrate the second birthday of our son, Akito, who was born as I was beginning to write this book.