Understanding the Developing World

Thirty-five Years of Area
Studies at the IDE

Edited by

Hiroshi SATŌ

This work is the result of a collective effort to introduce the main trends of research interest, as well as some of the major findings, in the field of area studies at the Institute of Developing Economies since its inception in 1960. The essence of studies on Korea, China, Southeast Asia, South Asia, the Middle East, Africa, and Latin America that have been published largely in Japanese has now been made available in English for the first time. Research on each of the regions is summarized in separate chapters, and the book ends with a chapter discussing the meaning of area studies.

Hiroichi Yamaguchi was born in 1933, was educated at the University of Tokyo, and worked at the IDE from 1959 to 1991. He is now a professor at the Faculty of International Studies, Bunkyo University, Kanagawa Prefecture. His main research interests are alternative development, and nonalignment. He co-edited Development Strategies for the 21st Century (IDE, 1992).

Hiroshi Satō was born in 1943, was educated at the University of Tokyo, and joined the IDE in 1966. He is currently the director of the institute's Area Studies Department. His main field of research is the politics of India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh. He is the author of Uneasy Federation: The Political Economy of Central Budgetary Transfers in South Asia (IDE, 1994).
