

Acknowledgments

Most of the research work for the present volume was undertaken from 1987 to 1989 during my stay in Bangalore, Karnataka state, India, where I spent two years as an IDE overseas researcher working with the Institute for Social and Economic Change (ISEC), Bangalore.

I wish to thank Mr. Satish Chandran, director of the ISEC, for enabling me to complete my assignment. I am deeply indebted to the late Dr. L.S. Venkataramanan, ex-director of the ISEC, for his warm encouragement. I am particularly grateful to Professor Abdul Aziz, who took on the burden of being my academic advisor during my two years stay, and to Dr. Hemlata Rao who helped me in orienting my research work in Karnataka state. I am grateful to all the other members of the ISEC for providing me with a conducive academic environment.

I would also like to express my gratitude to the officials of the Karnataka state government who generously helped me with their facilities and information. I also wish to express my appreciation to the officials of the District Industries Centres as well as numerous industrialists and workers in Karnataka state for accepting many interviews and providing me with useful information. In addition, I would like to thank the many individual researchers from whose insights, criticisms, and intellectual stimulation I greatly benefited.

Valuable comments for improving the book came from the anonymous reviewer. Mr. Shōji Itō, councilor of the IDE, offered suggestions to strengthen the arguments. I am grateful to them. Finally, my sincere thanks go to Ms. Akiko Akemine of the IDE for editing the publication of this work. Innumerable people made this work possible, but I am solely responsible for its analysis, conclusions, and any shortcomings.
